MEDICAL.

The Old Reliable Family Medicine!

Has been introduced and sold

FOR THIRTY-ONE YEARS!

FROM

1840. TO 1871.

Perry Davis' Pain Killer,

Has been tested in every variety of climate, and by almost every nation known to Americans. It is the almost constant companion and inestimable friend of the missionary and the traveler, on sea and land, and no one should travel on our LAKES OR RIVERS WITHOUT IT.

☞ Pain Killer was the first, and is the only permanent pain reliever.

Since the PAIN KILLER was first introduced, and met with such unsurpassed sale, many LINIMENTS, RELIEFS, PANACEAS, and other REMEDIES have been offered to the public, but not one of them has ever attained the truly enviable standing of the Pain Killer.

☞ Why is this so? ☜

It is because Davis' PAIN KILLER is what it claims to be, a Reliever of Pain.

ITS MERITS ARE UNSURPASSED.

If you are suffering from Internal Pain, Twenty or Thirty drops in a little water will almost instantly cure you. There is nothing to equal it. It a few moments it cures Colic, Cramp, Spasms, Heart Burn, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, Wind in the Bowels, Sour Stomach, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache.

In sections of country where Fever and Ague prevails, there is no remedy held in greater esteem. Persons traveling should keep it by them. A few drops, in water, will prevent sickness or bowel troubles from change of water. From foreign countries the call for PAIN KILLER is great. It is found to cure Cholera, when all other Remedies fail. When used externally, as a Liniment, nothing gives quicker ease in Burns, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Stings from Insects, and Scalds. It removes the fire and the wound heals like ordinary sores. Those suffering with Rheumatism, Gout, or Neuralgia, if not a positive cure, they find the Pain Killer gives them relief when no other remedy will. It gives instant relief from Aching Teeth. From 1840, to this day 1871 (Thirty-one years), PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER has had no rival.

Every Housekeeper should keep it at hand, to apply it on the first attack of any pain. It will give satisfactory relief and save hours of suffering. Do not trifle with yourself by testing untried remedies. Be sure you call for, and get the genuine Pain Killer, as many worthless nostrums are attempted to be sold on the great reputation of this valuable medicine.

☞ Directions accompany each bottle.

Price 25cts. 50cts. and $1.00 per Bottle.

REVISITING MANASSAS.

The flattering battle-flags are still
That dawned above the marching column,
No more these slopes may know the tread
Of heroes' footsteps stern and solemn.
No shrieking shell tears through the sky
With hellish wild accents discord bringing;
The long low mounds are green with grass
And here and there a daisy springing.

Yes, here we stood that sultry day
When death's pale finger marked out often
His devil-dance, our comrades sank
In the dead deep no bright dreams soften.
I live it over, feeling now
The wild thrill of the battle fever,
And in my mind the angry hosts
Would seem to keep their feud forever.

I trace with lingering tread our lines,
Find out the spot where the uncertain
And awful charge and counter charge
Dispirited face and flank and curtain;
I get a glimpse of one whose sword
At every stroke flashed rays of glory—
The oriflamme of war that day—
He fell, to live again in story.

I fancy in our reverent march
When "to the color" God has sounded,
My soul may know the warrior dead
In ranks with angel hosts surrounded.
If comrades true each other know
In that grand muster, it were pleasant
To think the war-worn ranks are full—
And hear the answer "All are present."

REFINED COLD.

"You are so selfish, Lois!" said Helen Cameron plaintively. "You could paint the flowers upon these cushions in one half the time it will take me to embroider them."

"I suppose I could," said Lois, as she balanced her graceful little figure on the arm of the sofa. "But, you see, you are interested in the fair, and I am not."

"That is another of your selfish speeches. I don't believe you see the beauty of charity at all. If I had your income, I would give something to the poor."

"The poor! Are you not wandering from the text, Nell? I thought the fair was to buy a stained glass window for the church."

"So it is. I wasn't alluding to the fair just then; but you don't work for the Dorcas, nor give anything to the other church charities."

"Church charities are very popular in Nicetown since Mr. Godfrey Millard came here," said Lois, sarcastically.—"It is really edifying to see how all the church matters that languished and died while old Mr. Leigh was our minister, are suddenly reviving under the influence of a handsome young unmarried parson. Bah! I hate such transparent devices."

"I don't know what you mean," said Helen.

"I mean that Mr. Godfrey Millard must be blind if he does not understand this sudden enthusiasm for church affairs among the young ladies of Nicetown."

"Who cried last Sunday over Mr. Millard's sermon, I would like to know?" asked Helen.

Lois flushed crimson under her clear olive complexion, and beat an impatient tattoo with her little feet upon the sofa.

"I won't paint cushions for the fair, and I won't put on my most fascinating dress and smile and smirk all the evening at a table of nonsensical fancy goods, to buy a stained glass window for the church, in order to impress Mr. Millard with my intense piety and devotion."

Helen sighed, and opened a box of bright floss silk.

"I suppose I must embroider them then. It is too selfish of you, Lois.—But you never think of anybody but yourself."

"Never. I am going now to buy myself some chocolate drops. Adieu!"

Lois sprang lightly from her perch on the sofa spoke, and stood before the glass adjusting a jaunty little hat over a crop of short black curls. Her figure was very small, slight but graceful, and the black curls fell round a piquant little face, pretty and bright, lighted by superb black eyes. Everything about Lois Cameron suggested activity, quick, bright intellect, and a saucy defiance of rules and regulations usually governing young lady manners. Her dress was of bright coloring skillfully contrasted, and yet harmonizing with her face and figure; but while really neat and tasteful, there was that indescribable look of carelessness about it peculiarly adapted to the wearer.

Helen always sighed over Lois' dress.

"Cousin Lois has an income of her own that would warrant the most beautiful wardrobe, and she wears calico just as often as silk, and I don't believe she cares one pin what a dress costs, if it is gay or pretty."

A greater contrast cannot be pictured than Helen, lounging in an armchair, made to the little figure before the mirror; large, full in figure, of the fairest blonde beauty, dressed with care and taste. Miss Helen Cameron was as complete a realization of perfect repose as Lois was of sparkling activity. Her blue eyes were always sleepy, her fair hands always moved with languid grace; she walked slowly; she spoke in a soft drawling monotone. It was the contrast suggested by a beautiful large white Angora cat and a quick little black terrier.

"I am sure, mamma," said Helen, as Lois, nodding a farewell, left the room, "I think Lois is perfectly hoydenish in her manners and remarks."

Mrs. Cameron, a pale, rather faded copy of her only child, having heard the same remark every day for a year, since Lois had returned from boarding school to her care, only nodded in reply, and stitched industriously upon some sheets she was hemming; a taciturn, indolent woman, who thought she had perfectly fulfilled her duty to her daughter and orphan niece by sending them to an expensive school, and allowing them every advantage of the institution. Mrs. Cameron was wont to speak of herself as "a widow, reduced to poverty by the death of an idolized husband;" but poverty in her case meaning a comfortable home and income sufficient for many luxuries, she did not command that deep sympathy she probably felt was her due.

Nicetown was very much excited, about the time of which we write, by the death of the minister, who had married all the old people and christened all the young ones in the village. The excitement was by no means diminished by the advent of a young minister, a collegiate graduate, who was reported to be wealthy.

Never was devotion poured out upon a more irresponsive object, than the flatteries and homage of the female Nicetownians upon Godfrey Millard. He was a man yet young, but of that material of which, in olden times saints and martyrs were made. A follower of Christ from pure devotion, he prayed to save souls, to win sinners to repentance, to give life, heart, brain and time to his Saviour's work. He lived a life of rigid self denial, believing it was beyond the power of woman to touch his heart or even to please his eyes. Yet, in the necessary social intercourse, he was a gentleman by all the instincts of a refined, sensitive nature, and his face, pale and often sad, showed intellect of the highest order, and as plainly portrayed a studious life.

It was early decided by the Nicetown ladies that Mr. Millard was "odd." Tea parties given in his honor often lacked the compliment of his presence, picnics did not tempt him, and even that most gigantic of all young lady efforts, the fair for the stained glass window, was a miserable failure, as far as the minister was concerned, as he did not enter the room, and suggested that the money would be better distributed among the families of some fifty workmen thrown out of employment by the destruction of a cotton factory by fire.

Miss Helen Cameron was quite in favor of the proposed change in the destination of the funds. She had become so regular in her attendance at church, was so much interested in the Sunday-schools, and so fond of walking past the parsonage with little covered baskets, which she smilingly said "contained a trifle for the sick poor," that in spite of his self made resolutions of celibacy, Godfrey Millard could not avoid noticing her and thinking of her.

He thought she was very beautiful, like the angels in old paintings, with her soft blue eyes and golden curls, and she seemed so charitable and pious that it was quite touching in one so young. Sometimes the thoughts of the young minister strayed to a dark little face that was beside Helen's every Sunday. Such luminous eyes as were raised to his face, such eager, absorbed attention to the genius of his words, was seen in no other part of the church. Helen's eyes were always cast down in modest devotion, but these dark ones were almost an inspiration to a speaker.

But outside the church the little dark face never crossed the minister's vision. Lois did not belong to the Dorcas, did not carry little covered baskets past the parsonage. She rode a fiery little horse far out of the village every day; she was independent and self willed, and utterly unlike her angelic pious cousin.

In every walk of his daily life, Godfrey Millard found that angelic presence pervading the air round him. In his visits to the poor, he heard the most enthusiastic praises of Miss Cameron.

"Didn't the blessid lady come herself, and wash and dress the childer, and red up the place for me, when I broke my arm," said one tearful woman to Godfrey.

"What lady?"

"Miss Cameron. Don't you know Miss Cameron? She's spending her money free as water among the poor folks that's thrown out of work by the fire. We may thank her for many a meal of victuals during the hard winter, and she's as bright as a summer sun in the house. Won't she sit and tell the childer fair stories to keep them in bed while she mends their clothes with her own fingers, not to speak of the new shoes and hats she'll bring them it they are good. It's little like her cousin she is, that has a hard word for any of us."

"Her cousin does not seem like her?"

"Like her! She'll come sometimes and lift her dress, as if the place was poison, and read us a lecture on our laziness and extravagance, but it's little her hand goes to her pocket if we were all starving."

Not one, but many such stories were told to the young minister. It seemed to him a sad, strange thing, that the dark little face with the glorious eyes should cover a heart so cold, selfish and hard as was often described to him; but all the fairer by contrast was the charity of the fair, blue-eyed devotee. It puzzled him sometimes to account for any visits being paid to the poor, where no benefit resulted from them; but one shrewd Irish woman suggested:

"Don't she come in here just for the sake of being seen visiting us, that folks may think she comes to give!"

The affairs of the parish were otherwise in a very favorable condition, when a contagious fever, probably generated by want and dirt, broke out in the cottages of the fifty idle workmen. Many of the men were away, seeking employment elsewhere, but the women and children remained, and among them the disease spread with fearful, fatal rapidity. Godfrey Millard was unceasing in his devotion by the bedsides of the suffering and the dying. He was thought to be a hard, stern man by his social equals, but the poor found him gentle and sympathizing. Such touching appeals never left his lips in the pulpit as fell upon the ears of the fever stricken in the poor homes he visited.

He had come home one evening after a weary night and day of watching and prayer, and was waiting in his study for some refreshment, when for the first time there crept into his heart a longing for a home. His books, always before sufficient, would not interest him now. There was a disorder in the room that proved how entirely its care was light to hired hands, and he sighed as he remembered the forlorn look of the bedroom he had just visited for toilet cares. Involuntarily he thought how sweet it would have been to meet a wife's loving welcome to have had kind hands minister to his comfort, gentle words to soothe and rest him, and Miss Cameron became a very prominent figure in the foreground of his thoughts. He recalled the neat housewifely duties he had heard of her performing in the miserable homes he had just quitted, and felt sure that the hands so ready to give homely service for the dirty children and forlorn rooms would brighten a more refined home, and give dainty feminine charms to the rooms where love waited to reward the toil. It was some days, weeks indeed, since he had seen the lovely blue eyes and golden curls passing the parsonage, but everywhere he had heard of the devoted care of the sick given by Miss Cameron.

"If you please, sir, Mrs. Morrison's little boy is getting worse," said the servant, at the door.

"I'll be there in a few minutes," was the reply.

"Drink your tea, sir, first. You'll be sick yourself, sir."

"Yes, yes, Barbara; I'll drink the tea. Is the messenger waiting?"

"No, sir; he's gone for Miss Cameron. Johnnie is so fond of her! She is down at Ford's cottage. His wife is sick."

Miss Cameron! Did Godfrey Millard's heart beat a little quicker at the prospect of meeting the fair devotee face to face, in her mission of charity? She had always avoided him; of that he was sure, for he continually heard of her as having just left the house of some poor sufferer, as he entered it.

It was some little distance to Morrison's cottage, where little Johnnie lay dying, and as Godfrey entered the house he met the mother weeping in an outer room.

"Miss Cameron is with Johnnie, sir," she said, "and has been praying, fearing you would not get here."

A low sweet voice was heard in the inner room, and the minister stood silent, with bowed head, as words of earnest prayer met his ear. Loving words to the little sufferer followed—words that encouraged the little spirit starting on the lonely journey where all must sooner or later, follow. No terrors were pointed out, but the tender, pitiful Saviour was so gently described, the exquisite passages of Scriptures referring to children were so feelingly quoted, that Godfrey stood outside, certain that no words of his could add to the comfort offered to the dying child.

"Dear Miss Cameron," said the feeble little voice, "I am not afraid now Will you hold my hand fast all the time?"

"I will not leave you, Johnnie."

"Please, sir, go in," said Mrs. Morrison, and Godfrey entered the room.

Seated on the bed, pillowing the child's head in her arms, the soft dark eyes looking earnestly into the feverflushed face, was Lois Cameron.

"God bless her!" whispered the mother. "This is the third night she has been with Johnnie. See how pale she is, working over the sick."

Godfrey Millard knelt to pray, and before he rose the pure spirit of the child had passed away. Lois Cameron's face was very pale, as she gently placed the corpse upon the pillows and turned from the bed. Only a few step away she suddenly reached out her hands, and fell in a deep swoon upon the floor.

Godfrey Millard raised the little figure in his strong arms, and carried her to the outer room.

"Put her on the sofa, sir. I'll get some water.

"I will go to Mrs. Cameron's, and tell them where she is. They will be uneasy."

"No, they wont," said Mrs. Morrison, indignantly. "She hasn't been home since the fever broke out. She's just been catching what sleep she could on chairs and settees for two weeks. They are afraid of contagion at her house, so she just stays among the sick, watching and nursing, and getting rest as I told you. No wonder she is worn out."

"But her cousin will surely come to her," said Godfrey, who could not all at once dethrone his fair vision.

"Her cousin! She was frightened to come near us before the fever. Dear knows what she ever did come for. Miss Lois has been coming ever since she came to Nicetown, but Miss Helen just came a spell after you came, making show visits, and never putting her hand out to help, if folks wanted help ever so bad. There! she's coming round. Leave her to me, sir. My bed is poor, but it's clean, and her own mother couldn't nurse her better than I will, for my dead boy's sake."

Still bewildered, Godfrey Millard left the cottage, sent a physician there, and kept on to Mrs. Cameron's. The door of the sitting-room stood open as the servant went in with his message. His blue-eyed angel spoke in answer.

"They must take care of her. I won't have her brought here, to give us all the fever. Just like Lois, to go poking in those miserable holes, to catch some horrid disease."

"You went before the fever broke out," said Mrs Cameron.

"I was very careful where I went, mamma, and I always kept near the door, and never let any of the dirty little brats touch me. I never knew how Lois contrived to spend so much money and dress so meanly, until I heard them talking about her in the factory cottages. So sly and secret! I hate sly ways."

Godfrey had heard enough. Sadly and very thoughtfully he retraced his steps to Mrs. Morrison's cottage. The report was unfavorable. The doctor pronounced Miss Cameron sick with the fever, and in its most malignant form.

But as the days of danger wore on, it was beautiful to see how the little sufferer was beloved. Little enough had the poor around to give, but more devoted, gentle nursing was not given to their own children. She was never alone. The cooling drinks were always ready, the medicines carefully administered, and many delicacies provided by her thoughtful care for others, were now brought to her own lips. Mrs. Morrison seemed to forget her own loss, in battling for the life of the bright young girl; and at last youth and health conquered, and the patient was pronounced out of danger.

Before Lois could leave her room the fever had decreased. No new cases were found, and those already ill were recovering. It was a day of general rejoicing when Lois Cameron returned home. Mrs. Cameron and Helen had been assured by the physician that all danger of contagion was over, before they opened their doors to the bright little brunette who had left them sparkling with health and beauty and returned feeble and pallid.

But health came back again soon, and with it a grave, shy happiness that softened wonderfully the vivacious beauty of the dark face. For in those days of convalescence, no longer separated by shy pride or reserve, the noble hearts of Godfrey Millard and Lois Cameron had learned that true, perfect love which is born of respect and honor. The sternness of the one and the saucy defiance of the other have melted in the sunlight of strong mutual affection, and it is hard to tell which is most beloved in Nicetown, the eloquent, devoted minister, or his active little wife, who was Miss Cameron.

The Clark County Democrat says: "Pohite, the celebrated stallion, belonging to Mr. John Marders died last Sunday night of lung disease. Pohite was sired by Clark Chief and was valued at $2,000. Mr. Marders has been very unfortunate with his horses lately, having lost two within the last ten days, valued at $17,000."

The Iowa State Register puts it thus: "Miss Jennie Swinney was postmistress at Blairstown. But the other day she got married, and then there was no Jennie Swinney any more. Losing her name she lost her office, and a widow lady, named French, has been appointed in her place. This suggests an inquiry: Supposing some of the young unmarried women elected County Superintendents in Iowa this fall should get married during their official term would they marry themselves out of office? If the people of a county elected Miss Mary Smith Superintendent, would she, as Mrs. Mary Jones—John Jones' wife—be competent to continue in the position? If so, and she should sign her new name, how would it be legalized? It would look as though Mary, when she said yes to John and the minister, would have to say good-by, office. It may be we shall have a practical test whether a girl will love an office best or a man."

About a week ago a man in Troy, New York, applied to the Mount Ida Cemetery and requested a grave to be dug, to be ready on the following day. The instructions were heeded, and at the time appointed the funeral cortege arrived at the "home of the dead." The corpse was contained in an elaborate coffin lined with white satin on the outside of which was the usual inscription of birth and death. The ceremony was performed, and the mourners wended their way homeward. A headboard was placed at the grave, on which appeared the inscription: "Our little adopted child." A day or two subsequently the Superintendent of the cemetery, having his suspicions excited, had the grave opened, and on raising the coffin lid the body of a dog was found calmly reposing in death. The unsentimental Superintendent had the coffin and "our little adopted child" pitched into the creek.

COLONEL JACK ALLEN.

The Notorious and Adventurous Kentuckian on His Death-bed in Texas—A History of the Filibusters.

[From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

A letter announces the impending death of Colonel Jack Allen, at Bright Star, Hopkins County, Texas. He was widely known in the Southwest. In his young manhood he had the misfortune to slay a man in Shelby county, but the jury adjudged it a clear case of self defense, and he was acquitted. Shortly afterward he left for Missouri, and, with a single companion, made his way through the Indian Territory and thence into Texas. That people were then at war with the Mexicans. He was with Sam. Houston at the battle of San Jacinto, which ended the war. He returned home and engaged in farming; but when the war broke out on the Rio Grande Allen raised a cavalry company, and was with General Humphrey Marshall's regiment at Buena Vista.

The conclusion of the Mexican war let loose a set of restless men eager for any warlike enterprise. The acquisition of Cuba attracted their attention, as it did indeed many leading men in the South. Jack Allen was of course among the number. He raised a band of men in Kentucky, and was prominent among those who composed what may be called the "first Cuban expedition." Sailing from a Southern port in a small vessel by orders to act in concert with the Creoles of Cuba, who were said to be ready to revolt, the "filibusters," as they were termed, proceeded to the Island of Contoy, near the coast of Yucatan. A sojourn of three weeks with exposure disgusted the men until orders were given to leave, when their spirits revived. The vessel made its way to Cardenas, on the northern part of the island, where they were landed. Their rebel friends, to their chagrin, informed them that their force was too small to throw the island into revolution, and declined to give any assistance. The authorities had been advised of the plans of the filibusters, and had a force close at hand to meet them. They charged on the filibusters, who gallantly repulsed the assault, and knowing discretion to be the better part of valor, retired to their little vessel. Allen fought bravely in this fight. The filibusters then headed for Key West, and when within a few miles of that place, discovered the Spanish man-of-war, Pizarro, bearing down on them under a full head of steam. She approached near enough to fire a few shots at the vessel, but the boys escaped and scattered over the place.

The year following (1851), the filibusters were again at work under Lopez, and Jack Allen was with them. He raised several hundred men in Kentucky, and took them to New Orleans. Lopez, with the lamented Major Wm. Crittenden, had also left for the island. Their fate is known. Crittenden's little band of fifty men was captured and, with himself, shot, and Lopez was garroted. In the meanwhile the Kentuckians in New Orleans beseeched the Cuban Aid Society for transportation, but in vain. When the fate of the expedition was known, the filibusters in New Orleans disbanded, and Allen and others returned to Kentucky. Several expeditions of a similar character were projected between that time and the year 1856 by General Goicouria, with Col. Allen as one of the leaders, but all of them failed. General Walker and his filibusters, however, had met with more success in Nicaragua, and Jack Allen determined to join him. He chartered the steamer Sultana, and left the Portland wharf May 21, 1856, with nearly two hundred men, for this expedition. Few, alas! were destined to return. Half of the number reached Granada, where Allen was appointed Colonel of the regiment. He subsequently returned to Kentucky on the plea of ill health. He believed the cause of Walker was lost; and while here he arranged with Goicouria for another Cuban expedition, embracing the enlistment of his own men in Nicaragua, as well as others who desired to leave Nicaragua, but who were restrained therefrom by force. Goicouria was to send a vessel to San Juan del Norte to bring away the men. General Lockridge, who was subsequently the commander on San Juan river, was in the secret. Allen returned to Nicaragua; but a successful operation of the Costa Ricans, in capturing from Walker the steamships on Lake Nicaragua, defeated the Allen-Goicouria descent on Cuba. Colonel Allen left Nicaragua in

THE DEMOCRATIC OUTLOOK.

We have never been querulous in misfortune nor disheartened by repeated defeats. We have watched the Democratic legions, year after year, move to the assault, and though driven back, they have always left the field with their courage high and their ranks unbroken. Amidst so many disasters no party ever preserved such wonderful vitality, such amazing resources of consolation, and such an intact organization. Hardly has one repulse been received ere the party organs and the party leaders are sounding the notes of defiance, rallying the discomfited but still resolute columns, and hurrying them forward to another attack. Ever since the war closed, we have been looking at this curious spectacle—and yet we have failed to wrest victory from the hands of the Radicals, to turn the popular tide towards our principles and aims, and to dislodge from their places the party now holding the reins of government. Indeed, in view of the fall elections, we are almost led to believe that our chances of success are more meager than they were six years ago. Instead of wresting conquests from the enemy, in some States we have lost ground and the scepter has passed from our hands. The fault certainly does not lie in the alleged heresy of our view of the principle on which our form of government is based. It does not lie in the apathy and irresolution of the Democratic masses, for never did men cling more tenaciously to, and fight more stubbornly for, the faith they profess. Nor has the party suffered seriously by any great schism. There have been and are differences of opinion, but not of sufficient magnitude to effect seriously the result of any important election. Whilst repeated disaster has not abated the ardor or destroyed the faith of the Democracy, still it cannot be concealed that, to some extent, it has produced much anxiety and alarm and some depression in view of the coming Presidential campaign. If things go on as they have for the past two years, it is even now apparent that Grant will be re-elected, and the country beridden for another four years by a Radical administration. To avert this catastrophe, is the wish of all who love their country and cherish our peculiar federative system.

To obtain success, various courses of action have been pointed out by the leaders of public opinion. On the one hand, we are exhorted to eschew all progress, all reform, left by the war, all the march of events, and to run a candidate squarely upon the Calhoun theory and the Southern interpretation of the resolutions of '98. For the correctness of this construction, partially, the South went to war, and the appeal to the sword was decided against her. To revive this issue as a party one, whatever our individual views may be is but to court certain and inevitable defeat. On the other hands, we have the suggestion that the Democracy make no nomination for 1872 for President, but stand aloof in the hope that the moderate disaffected and conservative wing of the Republican party, headed by such lights as Schurz and Brown, disgusted by the corruptions and usurpations of their old associates, venerating our ancient system as the perfection of human government, loving liberty and the reign of law, and anxious to repress within their constitutional spheres all the branches of Federal power, and to save whatever of freedom we may have left, will bring out a candidate of its own upon a platform upon which all good, true and patriotic men may unite. We confess that the prospect of any movement in this direction is slim. We can detect no signs of disintegration in the Republican ranks portentous enough to indicate a serious and irreconcilable disruption. We are aware that with many thoughtful and right—thinking Republicans there exists coldness towards the present administration, and disapproval of many of its measures as unwise, usurping and revolutionary; but so far as we can read the signs of the times, especially in the light of the events of these latter days, this discontent is confined to a few chiefs too great and ambitious perhaps, to be led, and is not shared in by any considerable mass of the rank and file. The most that can be said is that every discernible phase of this discontent can be regarded no more than a symptom of approaching dissolution, but betokens no time near enough to warrant the building of Democratic hopes upon the early demise of the powerful organization of our adversaries. The fact now boldly stares us in the face, that through 'thick and thin, through evil and good report," in spite of foes without and foes within, in spite of internal feuds and endless corruption, the Radical party clings together with a cohesiveness that defies successful as- and upon every field and in ev- and at every contest pre- d and unbroken front this recalcitrant el- nt popular support e in opposition to s there that it TION? And should it do so, there are many things to be considered before the Democratic party can throw itself into the arms of such an organization. One thing is certain, that it cannot stultify itself by the unconditional abandonment of the principles upon which our form of government is reared. It cannot coalesce with any movement that requires the surrender of its views upon the just limitations of State and Federal authority. However solicitous it may be to purchase victory, it cannot buy it by the sacrifice of principle.

We do not pretend to say that such a movement as the one indicated may not be set on foot, and a candidate presented on such a platform as will command the support of the Democracy. A platform so wise, liberal, patriotic and national may be constructed as to prove palatable to the entire party throughout the Union, and a candidate be chosen of such views as to merit and claim its support. If victory can be achieved on this line, we are willing to surrender old prejudices to give up many antiquated and obsolete opinions, and "accept the constitution as it is;" but cannot affiliate with any organization that has the taint of Federalism on its garments, that looks to the destruction of the just sovereignty of the States and the annihilation of their reserved rights, and that leans in thought, word, or deed towards centralism.

We may cheer ourselves by the vague hope that before the Presidential election there will be such coalition or combination of political elements as will lead to the downfall of Radicalism—a coalition that will invite to its councils the bulk of the Democracy—but at present we confess that the Democratic outlook is dreary, and that our political horoscope must be recast under happier constellations, before we can hope to expel the Radicals from power.

ANOTHER NATIONAL TAMMANY RING JOB.

The following appeared among the Associated Press despatches of Friday morning:

A reporter of the Evening Journal last night interviewed A. B. Mullet, supervising architect of the United States Treasury Department, in regard to the new Government buildings for Chicago. Mr. Mullet says in a general way, that the President, Secretary of the Treasury, Senators Trumbull and Logan and Representative Farwell, are agreed in this, that the Government buildings are to be removed from the present site. The new buildings will be begun early in the spring, if not before, and will be equal in every respect to any buildings ever erected on this continent.

In this necessity the President and Secretary, and Speaker Blaine, who was present at one interview, cordially agree with the Congressional Representative from this State that the new buildings shall be not only ample and commodious, but also, while avoiding, of course, all unnecessary and uncoming ornamentation, shall equal in materials, design and style of finish, any building in the country. The Government intends to occupy a whole square with the buildings. The pile of Government buildings, in that case, could stand in the center and be completely isolated in case of fire. Paying a fair price for the land, a square, will, perhaps, cost a million dollars, the buildings will foot up to three millions more. If owners of land on the square refuse to sell them the lots at fair prices, the Government will proceed under law, and condemn the land under the same law that lands are condemned for railroads &c.

The government already owns a large quantity of land in the city of Chicago—more than is contemplated in the above job—which cost considerably over a million dollars a few years ago, on which the Government buildings stood at the time of the recent fire. Those buildings were centrally located, were sufficiently commodious, and cost the Government within a fraction of five millions of dollars. The land on which the National Tammany Ring proposes to locate the new buildings is neither centrally nor favorably located, belongs to the Representative Farwell mentioned above, and would not bring, if sold at the highest Chicago rates one quarter of the money the President and Secretary of the Treasury propose to pay for it. Of course Grant and Co., are well paid for this transaction. The Government, whose debt is already so large as to almost defy the power of mathematics to enumerate it, is to be burthened with five or ten millions more, for what? That Congressman Farwell may put money in his pocket, that Grant and Co., may turn honest pennies, and that the Tammany Ring of New York city may blush at the insignificance of their little plundering adventures. Will the people never rise and drive the money-changers and thieves from the temple?

☞ Count Benedetti, who figured so prominently in the diplomacy which immediately preceded the Franco-Prussian war, is concerned in a curious affair which is likely to come shortly before the law courts.—That gentleman, who is himself of Greek descent, when Consul in Egypt, married a young Greek lady, who passed as the daughter of M. Anastasis, a wealthy merchant settled at Alexandria. It was, however, generally known that Madame Benedetti, was a Greek slave of great beauty who had been taken very young into Egypt, after the war in the Morea.—M. Anastasis, who had no family, had purchased her, adopted and brought her up, and on his death he left her the whole of his fortune, which amounted to several millions of francs. The relations of the deceased protested against the will, but did not venture to dispute it under the Empire, the husband of Madame Benedetti possessing great influence. At present, however, a nephew of M. Anastasis has taken up the subject and placed it in the hands of two advocates of Paris.

SENATOR GARRETT DAVIS

Was born in this town (Mt. Sterling) on the 10th day of September, 1801.—His family before him, as far back as can be traced, have possessed eminently the respect and confidence of their neighbors. He was one of a family of brothers distinguished for fine natural endowments. The brilliant talents of Amos and Singleton Davis are still remembered by our oldest citizens.—Senator Davis has never been an office-seeker, while he has held many places of public trust. He seems to have acted throughout life upon the principle of biding his time and never to have stood for an office until the people were ready to bestow it upon him; and then throwing into the contest all the vigor and energy of his intrepid nature, it has been his good fortune never to have been refused.

In 1833, he was first elected a Representative from the county of Bourbon to the State Legislature, and was re-elected in 1834, and again in 1835; from which time he devoted himself to the practice of his profession and his private business until 1839, when he was elected to Congress, and was re-elected in 1841, 1843, and 1845.—Before the expiration of his last term he determined to retire to private life; and in view of this resolution, informed a friend of the late Governor C. S. Morehead that he would not be a candidate for re election. After he had made this communication, he fell in with Mr. Clay, who inquired of him if he intended to be a candidate, and on being answered in the negative, responded: "You have an extensive acquaintance with members of Congress and with men who visit Washington City. The National Convention to nominate a candidate for the Presidency will be held next summer; I have confidence in your fidelity, and would like you to be in Washington City and a member of Congress to look after my interests." Mr. Davis excused himself to his illustrious friend by telling him of his pledge to Governor Morehead.

Mr Davis was a delegate to the State convention that nominated Mr. Crittenden for Governor; and after that most enthusiastic nomination, was, unexpectedly to himself, with somewhat kindred feeling nominated for the office of Lieut. Governor, but upon his earnest request the convention withdrew it and nominated Hon. Archibald Dixon.

A subsequent State convention, of which Mr. Davis was a member, tendered the nomination for Governor to Judge Loving, but had previously informally urged it upon him; he distinctly declined it upon the ground that there were other men more competent to discharge its duties and more acceptable to the people. Judge Loving took time to decide whether he would accept the nomination, and upon his declining it, the State Central Committee, which had been authorized on that contingency, to make another nomination, with Mr. Morehead, wrote to Mr. Davis, insisting that he would consent to take the nomination; but he answered, declining, saying that he was not the right man—that Mr. Morehead was—and the event proved it.

Mr Davis was a member of the Constitutional Convention of 1849, and continued in that body until it agreed on and signed an amendmendid constitution; but his objection to its principle of a judiciary elected by the popular vote, was so decided that he voted against the constitution, refused to sign it, and left the convention.

Mr. Davis has been twice elected to the United States Senate, once for a full term and the other wanting but a small fraction, and we understand from him that he neither seeks nor declines a re-election. His services in the Senate are a part of the history of the country. No State ever had an abler or more fearless and vigilant Senator. His speeches deserve the profoundest study of the people as well as of the statesman. They are models of style, rich in political knowledge, and breathe the spirit of the true patriot.

We will say for Mr. Davis, that his political career has not been marked by inordinate ambition or love of office. Amidst all the corruption of the times, no word of reproach has ever been breathed against his purity. He has been faithful among the faithless; and is distinguished for the purity of his private life, his incorruptible integrity and his ardent love of country.

For a man of his age, he has remarkable physical and mental vigor and activity, and is as competent as he ever was to discharge the duties of Senator. He has a proper and profound sense of the great honors that have been bestowed upon him by the people of his State; and although he would regard another election to the Senate, after his years of arduous labor and unremitting vigilance in that body, as the crowning honor of his life, yet a different disposition by the Legislature of that high trust would not and could not give him any pain or disappointment whatever.

☞ Benjamin Conley, President of the Georgia Senate, has become Governor of that State by the resignation of Governor Bullock. The Atlanta papers of last week contain his message to the Legislature. It is a tame, brief document, of little force. Though a Radical, he professes to be conservative, and protests that in the discharge of his official duties he will not allow party politics to control him in any degree.

☞ If the sprightly young editor of the Cynthiana Democrat wants to be an angel and with the angels stand, with a crown on his forehead and a harp in his hand, he must pay more reverence to that divine law which forbids the bearing of false testimony against one's neighbor. Now, if our young friend's salvation depended upon his proving that "the editor of the Mt. Sterling SENTINEL has been laboring hard to lead off the Democracy with a 'New Departure' and get them to declare that they did not act in good faith when they declared that the amendments to the Constitution were illegal and villainous frauds," and that we are "now laboring equally as hard to continue Grant in office," he would be damned to a dead moral certainty. There is this about the amendments and we want our young friend to pay particular attention to that which we say: Whatever may have been the means, and howsoever illegal they may have been employed to fasten the amendments upon the fundamental law, all the forms of law were complied with and the result was and is approved by the controling public sentiment of the country. This fixes the amendments forever upon the Constitution. We deprecated a war upon them as useless and futile. Nothing short of successful revolution can expunge them from the fundamental law. Hence we opposed a hopeless attack upon them as foolish and suicidal. We urged acquiescence in the result because we believed that result irrevocable. And that is all of our "New Departure."—The charge that we are laboring to continue Grant in office would be contemptible were it not silly. One of the arguments we used in favor of the acceptance of the validity of the Constitutional amendments, was that the Democratic party, pledged to the repeal of the amendments, would invite certain defeat. For this very truthful statement we were very bitterly and unjustly assailed by a portion of the Democratic press, and the Cynthiana Democrat was remarkably bitter and unjust in its assaults upon us. Latterly that paper has learned that "coming events cast their shadows before," and accepts the results of the recent elections as the prophetic shadows cast upon the political dial, and remarks that "the editor of the SENTINEL knows, as well as he knows anything, that the Democracy cannot win, single handed, in the next Presidential campaign. And instead of counseling his friends to forbear nominating a candidate, he with the same uncompromising tenacity with which he advocated the 'New Departure' urges them on to certain defeat." When we said that the Democracy must abide by the issue of the war, and cut itself loose from all dead issues, take position on the living issues of the present, and return to the ancient faith as it was before conspiring demagogues dragged it in the mire of African slavery, or suffer a more humiliating defeat than it had ever yet experienced, we were branded as a traitor who desired to surrender the party to the enemy.—And yet, in a few brief months, one of the very papers that so denounced us turns around and charges us with laboring to continue Grant in office because we oppose the abandonment of Democracy for bastard Republicanism! Our "departure" consisted in advising a return to Democracy as it existed prior to the National Convention of 1856. The "departure" of the Cynthiana editor involves the eventual and entire abandonment of Democracy. We are not prepared to go one inch in that direction. We are just that "unreasonable."

THE NEW YORK ELECTION.

The result of the election in New York is an indication that the people, irrespective of party predilections are determined to put down public thievery. The wholesale plundering of the Tammany Ring had reached that pass when longer toleration would be criminal complicity. Reform Democrats united with Liberal Republicans and the consequence was the wiping of the slate very nearly clean. This is as it should be. When a party becomes as rotten and corrupt as had become the New York Democratic organization, its neck should be brought to the block. Now let us all unite, honest Republicans and honest Democrats, to sweep from the face of the earth the National Tammany Ring of which President Grant is the "Boss" Tweed. Reforms abandoned when but half accomplished had better never be begun. Down with the New York plunderers was the cry the other day. Down with the Nation's plunderers should be the cry next year. Let the honesty, the intelligence, the virtue of the land take up arms against the Grant Ring, and it will be annihilated. Our prosperity as a people, our existence as a nation, our self respect, our honor at home and our good name abroad, all demand that the fate of Tammany shall be visited upon the Washington close corporation of public plunderers. Let the honest men of all parties unite upon the common platform of Reform, put an honest and capable man forward for the Presidency—regardless of his previous politics—and then move on the enemy's works. Victory would be assured, our good name redeemed, and the country saved.

CHOLERA.

The Scourge has Arrived—A Plague-Ship in Quarantine—Forty Deaths at Sea.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The steamship Franklin, of the New Baltic Lloyds' Line, arrived Saturday night with a number of cases of cholera. She sailed from Stettin on October 10, touching at Copenhagen on the 12th, and Christiansen. At the latter port she had 22 cabin and 611 steerage passengers, and a crew of 67 men.

When ten days out the first case of cholera made its appearance among the steerage passengers, and when the steamer put into Halifax to obtain coal there had been nearly one hundred cases of cholera and choleraic diarrhea, of which forty were fatal.

Since leaving Halifax one death occurred, and to-day twelve patients suffering from cholera were sent to West Bank Hospital.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Midnight.—Fourteen addition l cholera patients, from the steamship Franklin, have been admitted to the West Bank Hospital.

☞ Rev. N. M. Crawford, D. D lately President of the Georgetown College, died at his home in Whitefield county Ga., on Thursday night, November 24, from paralysis. He had suffered from paralysis, which affected his tongue, for about a month, and it gradually spread until his throat and head were affected. Dr Crawford was the son of Hon Wm. Crawford, (at one time candidate for President of the United States), and was about sixty years of age. His many friends throughout Kentucky will regret to learn of his death and will deeply sympathize with his bereaved family.

☞ An ingenious idiot has invented a steam engine so small that the whole thing does not cover a space as large as a three cent coin, and has it on exhibition at the American Institute Fair, New York. It is of one half flea-power. A good sized tear shed in the boiler stops it over, and is enough to run the engine two days.

☞ The Kentucky Legislature assembles on Monday December 4th.—The second Tuesday—the eighth day of the session—the two houses go into an election for United States Senator.

☞ A Pittsburg husband having died of small-pox his affectionate wife purchased a magnificent casket, in which his body was placed. Unused to such gorgeous surroundings, the dead man woke up, scolded his wife for spending so much money foolishly, and now wants somebody to step in and take the coffin off his hands.

☞ The Indianapolis Journal presumes that no man has the slightest doubt of the personal integrity of General Grant. True as preaching. But then it is because he doesn't possess enough integrity of any sort upon which to found a doubt.

☞ It is authoritatively announced that Beast Butler courts sleep in vain unless he tries it spoon fashion.

☞ Paris, France, manufactures undetectable imitation diamonds. A gentleman bought a stone there for 150 francs, (about $30), and took it to one of the largest jewelry houses in New York to be valued. They offered him $30 000 for the stone, and refused to be persuaded that it was not genuine.

☞ Ingenious, but impecunious, Georgians bite themselves with alleged rattlesnakes in the vicinity of saloons, in order to secure the privilege of drinking a quart of whisky.—The business is now somewhat dull—the natural effect of too much competition.

☞ M Charles Lefevre, a popular French gentleman, who, in England races his horses under the assumed name of "Mr. T. Lombard," has, it is said just come into a fortune of over $2,500 000, left him by a cousin whom he never saw in his life. The gentleman in question died in this country whither he immigrated many years since with the sum of $2 500, which M Lefevre's father lent him when all his other relatives turned their backs upon him.

STATE NEWS.

There are about seventy candidates for the two vacant tobacco inspectorships at Paducah.

Mrs Jane Edmonds of Lebanon, had for dinner the other day a pie made of the second crop of apples borne by her trees during the present year.

The tobacco crop in Ballard and McCracken Counties is said to be finer than any since 1863. The yield is not quite up to the average.

A negro was run over by the railroad train near Shelbyville, last Saturday night, and terribly mangled. He died three hours after the accident. The train caught him in a deep cut, where he could not get out of the way without running to the end of it. He started to run, and turning his head to look back at the rapidly approaching train, he stumbled and fell, when the locomotive and whole train rushed upon him.—[Lebanon Standard.

Two weeks ago, says the Lebanon Standard we noticed the departure of Mr. John P. Flanagan, a well known and respectable farmer of Marion county, for Osage Mission, Kansas, where he had bought a farm whither he went with his family to make his home. A day or two since his brother Mr. W. D. Flanagan received a letter from him, dated October 28, and posted 31 inst., in which he stated he had just finished paying for his farm, and the other contents of which seemed to indicate a cheerful and contented frame of mind. Last Tuesday afternoon, however, his brother was shocked and grieved beyond measure by the reception of a telegram from John E. Buckman, dated Osage Mission November 7 1871, stating that Mr. Flanagan had become insane and had killed two of his children. Mr. Flanagan was the father of three children aged respectively, about one, three, and five years. It is not stated which were the victims. Mr. Flanagan had sustained a short time before his departure pecuniary losses to the amount of about $1 600, by the failure of P. B. O Daniel. These had weighed heavily upon his mind and had led him before he left Kentucky to express apprehensions that they would dethrone his reason. The lamentable sequel shows that his fears were only too well founded.

This is the grandest scheme ever presented to the public, and the drawing will positively take place at the time specified. Call at the SENTINEL office and secure your tickets at once.

☞Our clever young friend Capt. J. T. Postlethwaite, assisted by A. C. Brantley, has been detailed from the Engineer corps of the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad for service on that part of the road lying between Mt. Sterling and Stoner. Capt. Postlethwaite is a clever, sociable gentleman, an excellent engineer, and we take pleasure in welcoming him amongst us.

GORED BY A STEER.—On Friday morning a little negro boy named Jim Ramey, while endeavoring to head off a steer in Mitchell's alley, belonging to Jere. D. Wilson, the butcher, which he was driving to his slaughter pen, was gored by the animal—the horn striking him under one jaw, splitting his tongue, and coming out at the other jaw, breaking both of the jawbones. We learn that there are some prospects of the little fellow recovering from his terrible injuries.

THE EXTENSION OF THE KENTUCKY CENTRAL.

We notice an item which has been going the rounds of the press for several weeks to the effect that the Kentucky Central Railroad Company, if they are successful in the suit pending before the Court of Appeals, involving the ownership and possession of their road, propose extending their road on South, via Richmond, &c. If this be not a bid for the favor of the Court, but the actual determination of the Company, we would respectfully call the attention of that corporation to one or two facts of physicial geography which should, by right of economy and interest, have great weight upon deliberations looking to the construction of a public work of the magnitude of the one in contemplation.

Starting from Paris, and running through Winchester, the distance to Richmond is thirty-eight miles, with no advantage arising to the road from the country traversed save the tapping of the Big Sandy road at Winchester From Richmond to Proctor, the distance is forty miles, with the certainty of a great amount of tunneling. On the other hand, a road from Paris to Mt. Sterling can be built inside of eighteen miles, a large trade secured, and fourteen miles further inexhaustable coal fields reached, of the very best quality of stone and cannel; and the distance to Proctor from Mt. Sterling is the same as the distance to that point from Richmond —forty miles. An unbroken valley is traversed by the latter route, and not a foot of tunneling necessary. The advantages of the latter route are obvious. First, a large traffic of which Mt. Sterling is the trading-point; second, unlimited supply of coal within twenty-five to thirty two miles of Paris, intersection of the Big Sandy at a point as near Paris as Winchester, and a saving of twenty miles in the distance from Paris to Proctor. By the Richmond route Big Hill is bound to be tunneled. By the Mt. Sterling route the distance to Proctor is lessoned twenty miles, with no tunneling, and right through the heart of a rich mineral, coal and timber region.

Another thing: a charter is already in existence for a road, to begin at any eligible point on the Kentucky Central, by way of Mt. Sterling and Proctor, to the Gap. This charter is the most liberal in its grants of any charter ever granted by the Kentucky Legislature. By it, the company has the power to secure to itself magnificent land bonuses. We have the assurance that any company constructing such a road can obtain al the mineral, coal and timber lands they may want—sufficient, indeed to construct the road alone. This land is the finest of the kind in the world. The iron ore is inexhaustable and of the richest quality; the coal is equal to the celebrated Youhougheny, and the timber embraces the finest and most valable for manufacturing purposes. By way of Richmond, until Proctor is reached, the trade has been already secured to the Kentucky Central, and will not and cannot be increased. By way of Mt. Sterling a new and valuable trade will be opened up that will be the making of any road. Our people will respond liberally to the demands of any company that will undertake to give us such a road. We want to make our mineral productions valuable to us by securing an outlet to market Our best interests are involved in the matter, and we will not higgle about terms with any responsible corporation that will give us such an outlet. We hope the Kentucky Central Company will consider the suggestions we have thrown out above, and heed them to such extent as to examine into their truth and feasibility.

☞Last Thursday a peripatetic but impecunious newspaper correspondent, endeavored to negotiate a dirty paper collar for a drink of brandy at one of our hotel bars, but failed. That night he revenged himself by writing a letter to the Louisville Courier Journal, in which he declared that both hotels charge Galt House prices, provide fourth-rate fare, and ought to be torn down. It is very sad.

NEW STREETS AND TOWN LOTS.—A new street is to be opened from Maysville Street, by the residence of Mrs Crane, running due west through the property of Mr. Henry C. Howard, to be intersected by Sycamore Street which is to be extended north; and a new street to be opened from High Street, in the rear of the property of Thos. Turner, Esq., running north to intersect the street to be opened from Maysville Street. This throws into market some fifty or more splendid and delightfully located building lots, belonging to Mr. Howard, which he will dispose of on reasonable terms and long payments. The titles to these lots are unexceptionable.

A FIGHTING PARSON.—Rev. —— Bowman, the new and dapper colored parson, signalized his assumption of the pastoral care of the black sheep hereabouts, on Friday last, by kicking up a devil of a row with some defenceless colored women, and figuring in the prisoners' coop at the police court. A pretty steep fine has cooled his ardor for fighting women for a week or two, during which season of rest we advise him to study his Bible and endeavor to learn something about christian deportment.

Protestant Episcopal Church.

On Thursday and Friday last, Bishop Cummins made his annual visitation to this parish, and delivered three eloquent and powerful sermons to good and appreciative audiences.

After the sermon on Friday evening, he confirmed six candidates, two ladies and four gentlemen, one of whom was the son of the Rector.

This long neglected Church, we are glad to say, exhibits no small amount reviving vitality. When the present Rector came here six months ago, the number of members was eleven They have increased by additions and removals to twenty-three.

The ladies of the parish propose shortly to give tableaux, &c., for the enlargement of the Rectory and the restoration of the little Chapel, of which due notice will be given.

There will be Divine service in the Court House on Sunday next, at 11 A. M and 6:30 P. M.

A collection was made on Sunday morning last, on behalf of the sufferers in Wisconsin and Michigan which amounted to ten dollars.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION.—The next Quarterly Meeting of the Disciples of District number 3, will be held in Mt Sterling, Nov. 21st, at 2 P. M. in the Christian Church. A large attendance is looked for, especially from the churches in Montgomery county. The meeting will begin promptly at the hour and last two or three days Preaching each night by ministers from a distance.

JOEL H. GRUBBS

We are authorized to announce Henry L. Jones as a candidate for Sheriff of Montgomery county at the ensuing August election subject to a Democratic convention.

To the Voters of Montgomery County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Sheriff, subject to the decision of a Democrat Convention. With the experience I have had in the duties of the office in years long past, my lifelong connection with the business community of this county, and the extended acquaintance of my fellow-citizens have with me, I can only promise that if elected I will endeavor to do my whole duty as an officer

Verp respectfully,

JOSIAH ANDERSON.

We are authorized to announce William Greene as a candidate for Sheriff of Montgomery county at the ensuing August election, subject to a Democratic convention.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Be Guided By What You Know.

There is an old proverb which says "Experience is the safest guide." To this guide the sick and ailing naturally turn when casting about for the means of relief. They inquire what a medicine has done for others, before they adopt it themselves. Of all the remedies and preventives in use, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters meets the test triumphantly, and hence its immense popularity and vast sales. The sufferer from indigestion is sure to find some one among his friends who has been cured of that ailment by the infamous vegetable stomachic. The victim of fever and ague, liver complaint, constipation, nervous prostration, or general debility, has only to make inquiry in the neighborhood where he resides in order to discover what this standard restorative has effected in cases similar to his own In the published testimony to its merits he will find a volume of proofs of its sanitary properties, which it is impossible for his common sense to resist. He tries it and the effect it produces on his system adds another to the host of witnesses in its favor. Thus, its reputation found on facts, not assertions, continually grows and spreads. Charlatans and impostors, some of them mere local tricksters, and others who take a somewhat wider range, attempt to thrust into the hand and down the throats of invalids, their haphazard concoctions, as substitutes for the tonic which for so many years has been a medicinal staple throughout the United States, South America, Canada, and the West Indies, but only succeed to a very limited extent. In this reasoning age, the people, having ascertained what is really deserving of their confidence, decline "running after strange gods."

MEDICAL.

THE CAUSE AND CURE OF CONSUMPTION.—The primary cause of Consumption is derangement of the digestive organs. This derangement produces deficient nutrition and assimilation. By assimilation, I mean that process by which the nutriments of the food is converted into blood, and thence into solids of the body. Persons with digestion thus impaired, having the slightest predisposition to pulmonary disease, or if they take cold, will be very apt to have Consumption of the Lungs in some of its forms; and I hold that it will be impossible to cure any case of Consumption without first restoring good digestion and healthy assimilation. The very first thing to be done is to cleanse the stomach and bowels from all diseased matters and slimy, which is always present in these organs so that they cannot perform their functions, and then rouse up and restore the liver to a healthy action. For this purpose the surest and best remedy is Schenck's Mandrake Pills. These pills clean the stomach and bowels of the dead and morbid slime that causes disease and decay in the whole system. They will clear out the liver of all diseased bile that has accumulated there, and rouse it up to a new and healthy action, by which natural and healthy bile is secreted.

The stomach, bowels and liver are thus cleansed by the use of Schenck's Mandrake Pills and disease entirely in the Stomach an excess of acid, the organ is supplied and the appetite poor. In the bowels the food passes off undigested, and produces sour stomach, headache, and sometimes Dysentery and Diarrhœa. In this condition the use of Schenck's Seaweed Tonic proves to be the most valuable remedy ever discovered. It is alkaline, and its use will neutralize all excess of acid, making the stomach sweet and fresh. It will give permanent tone to this important organ, and create a good, healthy, living blood. After this preparatory treatment, what remains to cure most cases of Consumption is the free and persevering use of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup. The Pulmonic Syrup nourishes the system, purifies the blood, and is readily absorbed into the circulation, and thence distributed to the diseased lungs. There it ripens all morbid matters, whether in the form of abscesses or tubercles, and then assists Nature to expel all the diseased matter, in the form of free expectoration, when it soon ripens. It is then, by the great healing and purifying properties of Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, that all ulcers and cavities are healed up sound, and my patient is cured.

The essential thing to be done in curing Consumption is to get up a good appetite and a good digestion, so that the body will grow in flesh and get strong. If a person has diseased lungs—cavity or abscess there—the cavity cannot heal, the matter cannot ripen, so long as the system is below par. What is necessary to cure is a new order of things,—a good nutrition, the body to grow in flesh and not faster than Nature is helped, the cavities will heal, the matter will ripen and be thrown off in large quantities, and the person regain health and strength. This is the true and only plan to cure Consumption, and if a person is very bad, if the lungs are not entirely destroyed, or even if one lung is entirely gone, if there is enough vitality left in the other to heal up, there is hope.

I have seen many persons cured with only one sound lung, live and enjoy life to a good old age. This is what Schenck's Medicines will do to cure Consumption. They will clean out the stomach, sweeten and sweeten it, get up a good digestion, and give Nature the assistance she needs to clear the system of all the disease that is in the lungs, whatever the form of the disease may be.

It is important that while using Schenck's Medicines care should be exercised not to take cold; keep in-doors in cold and damp weather; avoid night air, and take out-door exercise only in a genial and warm sunshine.

I wish it distinctly understood that when I recommend a patient to be careful in regard to taking cold, while using my medicines, I do so for a special reason. A man who has but partially recovered from the effects of a bad cold is far more liable to a relapse than one who has been entirely cured, and it is precisely the same in regard to Consumption. So long as the lungs are not perfectly healed, just so long is there imminent danger of a full return of the disease. Hence it is that I so strenuously caution pulmonary patients against exposing themselves to an atmosphere that is not genial and pleasant. Confirmed Consumptives' lungs are a mass of sores, which the least change of atmosphere will inflame. The grand secret of my success with my Medicines consists in my ability to subdue inflammation instead of provoking it, as many of the faculty do. An inflamed lung cannot, with safety to the patient, be exposed to the biting blasts of Winter or the chilling winds of Spring or Autumn. It should be carefully shielded from all irritating influences. The utmost caution should be observed in this particular, as without it, a cure under almost any circumstances, is an impossibility.

The person should be kept on a wholesome and nutritious diet, and all the Medicines continued until the body has restored to it the natural quantity of flesh and strength.

I was myself cured by this treatment of the worst kind of Consumption, and have lived to get fat and hearty these many years with one lung mostly gone. I have cured thousands since, and very many have been cured by this treatment whom I have never seen.

About the First of October I expect to take possession of my new building, at the Northeast Corner of Sixth and Arch Streets, where I am pleased to give advice to all who may require it.

Full directions accompany all my Remedies, so that a person in any part of the world can be readily cured by a strict observance of the same.

Testimonials.

I owned a first-class improved Wheeler & Wilson. After giving the Singer a trial I purchased one. I recommend it to all as being better adapted for all classes of work than any machine I have ever used.

MRS E. J. WYATT.

We are practical with Singer's, Wheeler & Wilson's and other machines. For all classes of work we recommend the former by all means.

J. M. CLYDE.
J. E. TIPTON.
T. H. EASTIN.

I have had Sewing Machine experience for ten or twelve years, for all classes of work—I cheerfully recommend the New Family Singer as the best. MARTHA ROSE.

I have used my Singer, which I purchased from Mr Reese about four years, and the more I use it the better I like it, and it never has been out of order since I bought it, and I never have found any fabric, heavy or light threads fine or coarse, but what I could sew it to perfection. I can recommend it to all as the best machine for all classes of work that can be had. MRS. J M. JONES.

I purchased an Elias Howe Sewing Machine from Mr Reese the agent, and my wife was very well pleased with it until she saw the New Singer Family Machine at work. Its convenience, speed, &c., was so far ahead of the Howe she sold it and bought a Singer which she thinks is perfection, and we recommend it cheerfully to all as being the best machine for everything in the market.

R. M. YATES

I have been using the Singer Family Machine for the last fourteen years without any expense, and it sews as well now as when I first got it I cheerfully recommend it to all who wish to purchase a machine for all classes of work. SALLIE FIZER.

THE LATEST NEWS.

The Moses Taylor, from Honolulu and Australia, arrived at San Francisco Sunday, bringing seven captains of the North Pacific whaling fleet from Honolulu, who bring terrible tidings from the Northern seas. The fleet, consisting of 33 whalers, in the latter part of August followed the whales through the seas of Anadyr and Behring into the Arctic Ocean, where they met with considerable success until about the 10th of September, when the entire fleet was hemmed in and crushed by ice-bergs.

At half-past nine o'clock Sunday night a column gave way in an African Baptist church at Louisville. The congregation, who were worshipping in an upper room, became panic-stricken, and the whole crowd rushed, crammed and crushed down two narrow stairways each side of the door, trampling down and over each other in their frenzied fright. Nine women and two children were trampled to death.

Brigham Young, accompanied by ten men of the Nauvoo Legion, reached Beaver, on the Southwestern confines of Utah Territory, in his flight on the 31st ult. He was heading for Mexico, and has bade an eternal farewell to Salt Lake City.

The explosion of a lamp of non-explosive kerosene, wiped the flourishing and enterprising town of Cachéville, Yolo county, from the map of California, Saturday.

Col. David Stanton, State Auditor elect of Pennsylvania, died at his residence in New Brighton Sunday morning, in the forty-second year of his age.

A rumor to the effect that the Pennsylvania Central railroad is about to become the owner of the Memphis and Charleston railroad gained currency and credence in Memphis Monday.

A good many strong minded women registered as voters in New York City on Saturday. They gave the registering officers choice between losing their scalps and having their faces clawed and putting their names on the list.

Mrs. Julia Haviere, who shot and killed Mrs. Lane, the paramour of her husband, at Stockton, California, a few months ago, was tried on the charge of murder and acquitted Saturday. Stockton is the market for Mrs. Fair, if she succeeds in getting a new trial.

The present owners of the Kentucky Central railroad give out that they will commence the construction of a railroad from Paris to Richmond, and perhaps further south, if the suit about their road is decided in their favor. The case comes up in the Court of Appeals November 14th.

On Monday last, Vincent Withers, living in one mile of Elkton, Todd county, committed suicide by shooting himself with a shot-gun. During the war, and owing to the freeing of the negroes, Mr. Withers sustained heavy pecuniary loss. Since that time his intimate friends have been apprehensive of his sanity. He was given to spells of the deepest gloom and melancholy, and his friends have for some time feared that in one of these spells he would be guilty of self-destruction. On Monday last Mr. Withers went to an office in the yard of his residence, there adjusted his gun, placing it against his breast, and, with a sort of fork which he had made for the purpose, discharged the gun. His wife heard the shot, and hastening to the cabin found her husband dead. A note was found, written to his wife, in which he stated that he had made nothing since the war, and was a burden to his family. Mr. W. was over seventy years of age, and connected with many of the best and most respectable people of Todd county.

The Los Angeles Riot.

[From the San Francisco Chronicle, Oct. 25.]

The reports of the recent outbreak in Los Angeles indicate a very unhappy state of affairs in that city. It appears that certain difficulties among Chinese led to the attempted arrest of some of their number, when an unoffending citizen who had been called upon to assist the officer in the discharge of his duty was fatally shot by some of the Chinese disturbers of the peace.

This incensed the citizens, and the Chinese quarter was surrounded, and the inmates being at length brought forth were summarily hanged to the number of eighteen, while several others were shot during the course of the melee. And now, as is usual, when people act without thinking, it seems that a mistake was made, and that while the promoters of the disturbance succeeded in effecting their escape, those who were killed were quite innocent of any participation in the original disturbance. There is no excuse, however, for such violent conduct. The laws are ample to punish all such offenders; and at Los Angeles, as, in fact, throughout the State, there has never been occasion to complain of their due execution. Or if the citizens of Los Angeles were determined to have summary vengeance, they might, at least, have taken time to shoot the guilty party.

A California boot black stands a fair chance of going into history beside the widow with the mite. MEDICAL.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for inspient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

The Great Medical Discovery!

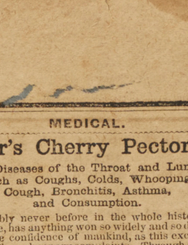
DR WALKER'S CALIFORNIA

VINEGAR BITTERS,

Hundreds of Thousands

Bear testimony to their wonderful Curative Effects.

WHAT ARE THEY?



THEY ARE NOT A VILE

FANCY DRINK,

Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits, and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced, and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics" "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter, and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters, according to directions, and remain long unwell.

$100 will be given for an incurable case, providing the bones are not destroyed by mineral poisons or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of cure.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, and Gout, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They invigorate the stomach, and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which results in the expulsion of unpurified efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia, and only these Bitters

Cleanse the [illegible] you find its impurities [illegible] Pimples, Eruptions [illegible] foul, and your [illegible] the blood pure [illegible] follow.

PIN, TAPE, [illegible] other WORMS, lurking in the system of so [illegible] thousands, are effectually destroyed and [illegible] well.

For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle, printed in four languages—English, German, French, and Spanish.
